

Online workshop
organised by the Corvinus University of Budapest, Hungary

Does well-being matter?
higher education teachers
during Covid-19 pandemic

WORKLOAD OF TEACHERS PROVIDING FIELD TRAINING AND LABORATORY EXERCISES

26th
NOVEMBER
2021

As part of the IVF project

“Does well-being matter? Higher education teachers during Covid-19 pandemic.”

The aim of the workshop is to:

- discuss specifics of the time distribution and workload of teachers participating on field trainings and laboratory trainings,
- discuss challenges and trends in field and laboratory training,
- stimulate discussion on pros and cons of laboratory and field training comparing to theoretical courses (with the emphasis on time allocation and well-being)

FREE REGISTRATION

TILL 23th NOVEMBER 2021

In case you (and your colleagues) would like to participate, please contact either Mrs. Miroslava Knapková, or the person as stated below together with the specification of the type of your participation and a proposal of the topic of the presentation.

Slovakia

Mrs. Miroslava Knapková

miroslava.knapkova@umb.sk

Poland

Mrs. Anna Barwińska-Matajowicz

abarmal@gmail.com

Czech Republic

Mrs. Monika Nová

monika.nova@htf.cuni.cz

Hungary

Mr. Tamás Mizik

tamas.mizik@uni-corvinus.hu

FORMS OF PARTICIPATION

You can participate with or without a presentation. The presentation (max. 15 minutes) should be focused on any aspect of field training and laboratory training and their influence on the teachers' workload and well-being.

Workshop is organised by the Corvinus University of Budapest, Hungary. Other details on the project webpages <https://teacherswellbeing.umb.sk>.

supported by

• Visegrad Fund

